AMERICAN IDIOM OF THE MONTH

“Ballpark Figure/Numbers”

Meaning:

An acceptable estimated range

Origin and Usage:

The exact origins of the phrase “Ballpark Figure” are unknown. It first appeared in the 1940s and ‘50s as “not even in the ballpark”, a phrase referring to estimates that were significantly wrong. Today, it is used to give or request estimated numbers that help paint a clear picture of what is expected.

Example:

Annie: “John, what are our ballpark numbers for the event on Saturday”
John: “We have about 25-30 people registered and it’s likely going to cost us $500-700.”
